

Membership Queries and Context-Free Languages

Makoto Kanazawa
HOSEI University

Algorithmic learning of context-free languages from positive data and membership queries motivates the study of a certain class of properties of context-free languages that has not attracted attention in formal language theory. I will review some results and open problems concerning these properties.